Arriving in China and Transferring to Jingdezhen

We are looking forward to meeting you! Travelling in China can be very exciting and we recommend learning about the culture and language before arriving. We can suggest www.ctrip.com for flight/accommodation information regarding your travel to Jingdezhen. Currently, there is one flight per day departing from: Shanghai, Beijing and Shenzhen to Jingdezhen. Shanghai is the closest international travel hub to Jingdezhen and the majority of all our residents fly in/out of Shanghai. The Pottery Workshop is able to make reservations for you at Motel 268, also known as Xiang Yang Hotel, on Xiang Yang North Road upon request. It is a modest establishment in a nice location. Another helpful website is www.travelchinaguide.com/cityguides/, lots of pertinent information.

Arriving in Shanghai

Shanghai has two airports, Pu Dong and Hong Qiao. Your flight to China will most likely arrive at Pu Dong Airport. You may wait for a taxi in the designated taxi queue just outside the airport doors. Give the taxi driver the printed name of your hotel in English and Chinese. The taxi fare should be about 180RMB to Xiang Yang Hotel. (Higher rate for taxi's after 11pm) A more affordable option, and perhaps faster, is to take the super fast MAGLEV train from Pudong Airport and get a taxi from the designated

Money

Jingdezhen is a cash economy. A credit card may be used for paying for The Pottery Workshop Residency Program; fees may be applied for costs such as transportation, materials and use of studio equipment. Traveller's Checks can be exchanged, but is very inconvenient. Debit/Credit cards can also be used at local ATM branches for withdrawing money (most convenient and a 2500RMB limit per ATM withdrawal is common). You may exchange major currencies at the Bank of China, but the currency must be in excellent/mint condition and the exchange process can be slow. Check with your bank before leaving your country about withdraw limits, verify that your card can be used in China and notify your bank of your travel dates in China.
